Cracked Glass by Marilyn Minter

Henzel Studio

Marilyn Minter is a contemporary American artist whose personal brand of photorealist painting examines contemporary notions of beauty. Minter has a painterly sensibility and an anarchistic attitude, with a no-nonsense approach to often-delicate subject matters. In Minter's practice, both photographs and paintings proceed from the same starting point. She organizes photo shoots in her studio, and assembles and reworks details from different photographs for digital compositions that are thereafter turned into final works.

Through use of variable pile-heights, actual cracks have been created. The water drops are elevated and have been enhanced with silk adding a contrasting sheen.
