

Intersection Table Lamp

Christopher Kreiling

‘Light Bearer’ (Intersection #3) came together as the earth paused in early March. Life as we know it had been intercepted by a force we were not prepared for. From this experience, we, the people as a whole, shared light, and love in order to heal. The dragon’s glass body is intersected by a clear neon rod filled with a subtle smoke-like soft glowing light. A black fabric covered cord follows the line of the glass as if it were one. The bronze base houses the UV Listed neon converter and is powered by an on/off switch in the back.
