

Welles Long Glass Chandelier 17

Gabriel Scott

The David Rockwell capsule collection introduces a contemporary take on the Welles Chandelier's timeless geometric design, featuring a sophisticated use of bronze glass. This material choice enhances the light fixture's luxurious appeal, drawing inspiration from natural clusters such as crystals, chemical compounds, and clouds.

Rockwell utilized botanical forms to craft an organic assemblage, with hollowed bronze glass polygons serving as metallic light points. These elements come together at varying heights and dimensions to form a floating light cluster. The feature chandelier stands out with its rich volume and organic essence.
